Nau mai, haere mai

The (fictitious) Faculty of Web Training researches and teaches people how to make accessible, effective, and user-friendly web content.

~~There are two main courses: Web Best Practice modules and Squiz training exercises.~~

Edit intro text

There are two main courses you must complete to become a web editor: an online Web Best Practice module and a two-day Squiz training workshop.

Meet the team ›

Style Guide

web guidance site tells you how to use the versity's Style Guide to write consistent, urate, and professional online content.

ead the Style Guide ›

2025 Weird Wide Web Lecture

Rear-Admiral Grace Hopper will be giving this year's WWW Lecture on how she coined the term c moth infiltrated the hardware on an early computer.

View the event ›

Remove promo

Summer internships

Gain practical experience in web content editing, plain language, and user experience through our programme.

Apply now ›

Add this instead

Welcome to the Faculty

Read a message from the Dean of the Faculty of Web Training, welcoming you to the world of web editing at Te Herenga Waka—Victoria University of Wellington.

Read the message ›

Add these cards

Exclamation Abolition group

Learn about the Exclamation Abolition research group, its mission, research, and summer internship opportunities.

Web editing guidance

As web editors, we need to make it easy for people to find information, complete tasks, and engage with our high-quality content. Our guidance site shows you what to publish and how to publish it.